JUSTIFICATIONS: -

- i) X-ray Diffraction Machine:
- XRD is a technique that provides detailed information about the crystallographic structure, chemical composition and physical properties of a material.
  - The principle behind XRD is constructive interference of monochromatic X-rays and a crystalline sample which is topic of interest from under-graduate level to the research field.
  - XRD has a wide range of applications in the field of Geology, Material Science, Environmental science, chemistry, forensic science, pharmaceutical industry and soil physics.
  - Vital usage of XRD are seen in the 'nano-physics' such as investigating structure of a crystal lattice, in determining elemental composition of each atom, and size of the nano-particles.

ii) GM Counter:-

GM counter, an electronic instrument used to detect various radiations ( $\alpha$ ,  $\beta$  &  $\gamma$ ). It is a Particle detector for measuring ionizing radiation. It can count individual particles at rates up to about 10,000 per second depending upon the specification of the device and is used widely in Nuclear physics, prospecting radioactive ores, determining leakage or exposure to X-rays, to test for contamination and to check radioactivity of metal objects. Counters are the integral section of digital electronics which being more practical to students of VC and PG get benefited from such device.

Crystal Growth Furnaces:-

→ CCF allows us to produce a lab sized crystals of semiconductor materials, metals, salts and synthetic stones. Crystal growth furnace is a system like an oven which can melt the material at a precise temperature to grow large single crystal ingots from small seed crystals. It is highly demanded for the study of semiconductor materials and increasing R&D activities globally.

3. To study the impact of these substantially pollutants on biosphere, lithosphere and atmosphere
4. To study the removal of toxic elements from this natural sources by bio adsorbents
5. To organize the awareness programme such as campaigning among local peoples to protect from pollutants.

Plan of research work:

The research work will be conduct in the following five academic years

2022-23 In this academic session we will emphasize the infrastructure, such as to build up a central lab and research library.

2023-24 In this period we will concerntrate on purchasing of sofisticated and valuable instruments from reported companies. (Instrument list has been attached)

2024-25 In this tenure, we will collect the samples from the environmentally significat sampling spots, then will analyse these samples for different qualities parameters by electronic instruments. The procure data will be evaluated by different statistical parameters. In this session we will also study the impact of different toxic elements on living organisms.

2025-26 In this period we will focus more on the removal of toxic elements from natural sources such as water and soil and will also organize campaing programme among public to minimize the pollutants and also prevents them from pollutants.

2026-27 In this session we will publish the research work in reputed and referred journals.

Methodology:

For analytical assessment of various kinds of pollutants in water and soil, we will use the different methods which has already prescribed in authenticated literature.

Facilities available in departmental research laboratory

Justification

Our college " Govt. G.B. Mahavidyalaya" is situated in highly polluted industrial coal mining areas. According to the pollution point of view this area has been considered as one of the highest polluted area not only in our country level but also world level. The continue coal mining activities from open and underground sources and their indiscriminate coal dumping and loading, their traditional technique for extraction of coal has majorly responsible for de-forestration and air, water and soil pollution. Keeping these problems in mind, we have taken a major project to assessment of these three basic part of environmental ecosystem. We will try to search a new indigenous technique to minimize these pollutants in air, water and soil.
